

Subject: Sinusitis, chronic

Case study

A 46-year-old woman struggled with chronic sinusitis for over ten years, experiencing persistent congestion, facial pressure, and frequent headaches. Standard treatments—including antibiotics, nasal steroids, and saline rinses—provided only temporary relief, and she felt her quality of life declining. The recurring discomfort affected her sleep and overall energy, prompting her to explore complementary therapies.

She began bioresonance therapy as an adjunct to her existing medical regimen. During her first assessment, energetic testing indicated disturbances in her sinus meridians and general energy burden. Her practitioner explained that "energy deficit and energetic fields can indicate areas needing support." A personalized plan, designed to harmonize cell frequencies and restore overall energy balance, was developed. Over the course of seven sessions, she noticed her nasal congestion eased and her headaches became less frequent. While she continues using her prescribed medications, bioresonance provided additional support, helping her pursue better well-being and improved daily comfort.
